MAN, WIFE TAKE
LIVES IN MODERN
ENOCH ARDEN TALETragic International Romance Revealed in Double Suicide

New York, Aug. 31—(AP)—An international Enoch Arden story in real life with a tragic ending has been disclosed with the suicides of Walter J. Fitzpatrick, a manufacturer, and his wife.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick, as a Belgian girl, was married previously to a British officer in a war romance. Believing he had been killed in action, she came to this country and married Fitzpatrick. Then the first husband reappeared. Like the fictional Enoch Arden, he went away. But unlike the case of his prototype, he revealed himself, and marital unhappiness followed his departure.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick was found asphyxiated in her Kew Gardens apartment last Friday. Dressed in an evening gown of yellow silk, she had evidently turned on the burners of a range in the kitchen.

Husband Shot Self

Police notified her husband who was in Deland, Fla., on business. Yesterday the police of that city telegraphed that he had shot and killed himself in a secluded spot near the city a few hours after the telegram arrived.

Mrs. Louise Bernie, a daughter of a wealthy Belgian merchant, married Colonel Jack Leacroft of the British army in 1917. After the second Marne offensive Leacroft was reported missing. Distracted, his bride came to this country. She married Fitzpatrick in San Francisco in 1920, first obtaining a divorce on the grounds of desertion.

She met Col. Leacroft on the streets here some time after the marriage. He begged her to divorce Fitzpatrick and marry him. She agreed. A gas attack brought on an attack. Discharged from the army, he had searched for his little Belgian girl on the continent, in England and the United States.

He Married Another

Mrs. Fitzpatrick laughed off her former husband's suggestion of remarriage. He left her and is reported to have married another. Whether or not meeting her husband proved on her mind, Mrs. Fitzpatrick's friends did not know. An unfinished suicide note, addressed to Miss Marie Weber, a dress shop proprietor by whom she had been employed, stated merely that "life is not worth living" and that she wanted to be buried under her maiden name.

Miss Weber told the police that the Fitzpatricks separated about a year ago. He had frequently threatened to kill himself, she said.

Frank J. McKee, Jr., of Philadelphia, Fitzpatrick's step brother, asked permission to claim Mrs. Fitzpatrick's body.

BULLETIN

Swampscott, Mass., Aug. 31—(AP)—President Coolidge was urged today to press for congressional approval of the federal coal commission's recommendation by John Hay Hammond, former chairman of the commission.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 31—(AP)—Anthracite mining in northeastern Pennsylvania will stop at midnight by order of the United Mine Workers.

The strike at 12 o'clock marks expiration of the two-year working contract of 158,000 workers who have been unable to agree with the mine owners on its renewal and who decline to work until some renewal is negotiated.

The walkout will place a virtual padlock on 828 mines in ten counties. It will involve, in addition to the bulk of miners, another army of their dependents. The full number of those dependent on the mines, and for whom bread winning accordingly stops, is put at 500,000. About 8,000 maintenance men will remain in the pits by mutual agreement to prevent flooding and to attend to their general upkeep. They will be assessed a day's pay every two weeks for the union's emergency fund.

The little girl with several other children were playing and had gone to an ice truck which had stopped in the neighborhood.

Returning, she narrowly escaped running into the pathway of a Buick touring car driven by Frank Gorham, which was rodding the corner. The driver of the car did all in his power to avoid hitting her and prevented running into the child, but one of the front fenders struck her, knocking her down, inducing the fracture. Mr. Gorham picked up the child and rushed her to the Dixon public hospital where she was reported this afternoon as improving, although not having regained consciousness.

NATION'S MORAL,
SPIRITUAL LIFE
UP TO VETERANSSo Declares Speakers at Opening of Illinois
Legion Meeting

Quincy, Ill., Aug. 31—(AP)—American organized fighting men hold within their power the nation's moral and spiritual progress, speakers declared here today at the opening session of the seventh annual convention of the American Legion of Illinois. The Legion's mission to serve America and to conserve the country's heritage epitomized the theme of the opening session.

"These young men are the best guarantee for freedom the world has ever known," declared General Milton J. Foreman, of Chicago, replying to a welcoming speech by Mayor Frank Jasper of Quincy.

National Commander James Drain of Iowa, said the American Legion "is the best spirit in America." He described the spirit of service in which the organization was born at a meeting in Paris in the early spring of 1915.

To Give, Not To Get

"You are in the Legion to give and not to get," he said. "If that is not the reason you are in it, you had better get out."

"Whether the world shall be better or worse as a result of the world war depends on the American Legion."

He said the Legion at one time had a reputation as a "bonus-pulling, treasury-raiding organization." "The fact that over 90 percent of the time and money of the Legion has been devoted to interests outside the bonus racket," he said.

Living testimony of the Legion's mission of service was presented in the band from the band from the Jacksonville State Hospital, composed of former service men who are patients, and the Illinois State Orphans' Home band from Normal. The orphans' band is composed chiefly of sons of veterans.

Soldiers Bands Play

The Jacksonville band was led onto the stage by Frank Gray, a patient, dressed in brilliant red trousers, white braided blue blouse and patent leather puttees and a drum major's hat two feet high, weighing twelve pounds.

The patients played one number, and then their director, Bernard Strongman, asked that they be excused from responding to the insistent demand for an encore. They expect to play at later sessions. The Orphans' band was honored several times. It was directed by Professor H. O. Merry of Lincoln.

INJURIES FATAL
TO BOY WHO FELL
UNDER BIG TRUCKSidney Hart, 13, Died at Hospital Late Saturday P. M.

Sidney Hart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Hart of Palmyra, who was run over by a loaded truck in the barn yard at his home Friday morning about 10 o'clock, died at the Dixon hospital Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. An operation performed Friday night disclosed ruptures of the internal organs and hope for his recovery was despaired of.

Coroner F. M. Banker conducted an inquest over the remains at the Staples-Moyer mortuary Saturday evening. Herman Hackman, driver of the truck which passed over the young man's body, told the jury of the accident. Sidney had been opening and closing the gate in the barn yard for trucks which were hauling lime rock on the Hart farm, and on previous occasions had jumped on the running board of the truck Hackman was driving.

Fell Under Truck

About 10 o'clock Friday morning, the witness stated, he drove into the yard with a load of lime rock and Sidney opened the gate for him. Passing through the gate, the driver of the truck was trying the avoid driving into a hole, when he felt the rear wheel pass over something and turning he saw Sidney's body on the ground. The boy made no outcry and Hackman stopped his truck, picked Sidney up in his arms and started to carry him to the house. The boy begged Hackman to lay him down and complained of internal pain, the witness told the jury. Hackman then ran to the house and notified Mrs. Hart and requested that she summon a physician.

Dr. R. L. Baird, who attended the young man, also testified before the inquest, stating that death was due to absorption and shock resulting from the accident. The verdict of the jury was in accordance with the physician's statement.

Funeral services will be conducted from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hart Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Aubrey S. Moore, pastor of the Methodist church of this city officiating and interment will be in the Oakwood Memorial mausoleum.

Head New Move to Oust Leader

Chicago, Aug. 31—(AP)—A group of Illinois democrats who for several years have opposed domination of the party councils of the state today announced organization of the "democracy of Illinois" with a view of "reorganization, and a re-statement of the fundamentals on which our party was founded" and the intention to enlist support from the sympathetic party workers in other states.

On the organization committee are Edward R. Dunne, former governor of Illinois; Carter Harrison, former mayor of Chicago, both anti-Brennan candidates for delegate at large to the 1924 national convention under the McCool banner and William L. O'Connell, the McCool manager in Illinois last year.

The new organization pledges to seek abolition of the two-thirds rule in future national conventions; to rid the national organization of the "poison germs injected into its veins at the New York convention"; to work for legislation under which the several states would define for themselves the meaning of the term "intoxicating liquor" in the 18th amendment and for state, rather than federal, enforcement of prohibition under such definition.

CANDIDATES FOR MAYOR IN HARD
FINISH OF DRIVEMud Flying in Large
Chunks in New York
Campaign

New York, Aug. 31—(AP)—Governor Smith and Mayor Hylan are continuing to tell the voters what they think of each other as the municipal campaign speeds up for the final two weeks drive before the primaries.

Hylan's supporters announce the formation of the Honest Government League to boom the mayor for a third term. Hylan's opponents are expressing curiosity as to what the league will do if the mayor is defeated at the primaries by Senator Walker backed by Tammany.

A statement by the league says that arrayed against Hylan are the "reactionary interests, the mongrel press, the mobsters, the Broadway loafers and parasites" and that the issue is "whether organized vice once more shall be triumphant."

William M. Bennett, insurgent candidate for the republican nomination against Frank D. Waterman, organization designer against John J. Lyons, another insurgent candidate, protests against what he regards as injection of religion into the campaign. Bennett said that Governor Smith, by accusing Mayor Hylan of dicker with the Klan in the democratic national convention, appealed to Catholics, negroes and Jews to vote for Walker.

THIRD PLANE TO MAKE LONE TRIP
TWO DAYS LATERNon-stop Flight to Honolulu is Aim of Navigators

San Francisco, Calif., Aug. 31—(AP)—Two of Uncle Sam's giant navy seaplanes stood ready this morning to take off on the proposed 2,100 mile non-stop flight to Hawaii. The third, the PB-1, biggest and heaviest of the three aircraft by 6,000 pounds, was still in the hangar at Crissy Field with a crew of expert mechanics bending every effort to prepare it for a solitary flight over the same route probably the day after tomorrow.

Decision to send the two PB planes weighing 19,000 pounds each when loaded to their full capacity, away at 9 o'clock this afternoon without the PB-1 was reached late last night by Captain Moses and other officers in charge of arrangements for the flight when it was determined that the engine of the PB-1 could not be replaced in time for flight today.

It was calculated that the flight would require slightly more than 26 hours. Only one record will be sought, that for distance, as a ship of this type has already remained aloft for a longer period than that estimated necessary for the test to begin today. The route a direct line, according to the Mercator projection, is already patrolled by navy boats stationed approximately every 20 miles between here and Honolulu.

CUT IN BUILDING
NAVY WILL MEET
BIG OPPOSITIONMany Senators, Congressmen to Fight the Budget Cut

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

Washington, Aug. 31—Big navy men are getting ready to put up a stiff fight, not only against the cut in ship building, but in favor of a much more liberal allowance than the present one.

It is alleged that Gluskin took the ferry wheel, and seven concessions, property of the Joyland Park Amusement Company of Chicago, a corporation, without first securing permission from the owner, Attorney A. L. Williams, of Chicago. The rides and concessions were being loaded for shipment to Kankakee when the deputies arrived in Amboy yesterday and stopped all activity by serving the writ upon Gluskin. The concessions and parts of the ferry wheel and whip were still at the fair grounds, where they were being torn down and packed for shipment.

Deputies were placed both at the cars and grounds to guard the property which was claimed by the Chicago attorney and named in the replevin writ. Papers were also served on the Illinois Central railway's agent at Amboy to prevent the cars containing the equipment being moved.

The property was guarded throughout the night and this morning at 5 o'clock, Attorney George W. Lawrence was on the scene with trucks and a force of men loading the property which was claimed in the writ, preparatory to shipping it back to Chicago. Gluskin left for Chicago, immediately after the papers were served yesterday afternoon, to consult his attorneys.

The procedure Sunday afternoon as several times threatened to result in a general outbreak. Arguments arose between operators of the concessions and laborers who were engaged in loading the equipment and several times the deputies found it necessary to intercede to break up threatened fights.

League of Newspapers
Will Not Print Taxes

Indianapolis, Aug. 31—(AP)—The Star League of newspapers in Indiana, owned by John C. Shaffer, Denver, Chicago and Indiana publishers, has a terse announcement today which says it will not publish income tax returns because it is "a matter of prying into private affairs." Members of the Star League in Indiana are the Muncie, Indiana and Terre Haute Stars.

The law permitting such publicity is "obnoxious, unjustified in the public mind" and the Star will work in common with other Indiana newspapers to have it repealed. The Star, says the statement, "cannot conceive that any person has the right, much less the desire to ascertain the amount of income tax paid by his neighbor. Therefore, it is not a matter of enterprise, rather a matter of prying into private affairs."

Aviation to Figure

The aviation question will figure in the controversy, but it doesn't seem likely that those who declare the plane has made surface flight obsolete can muster enough strength at present to produce a serious impression. They may make a pretty energetic bid for more and improved planes as naval auxiliaries, but not as substitutes for surface ships. It is to be considered that this latter proposition never has had any proponents among naval officers, even in the air service, those who have advanced it having been exclusively army aviators.

Coolidge for Planes

The plane's potentialities, however, may count considerably on the side of President Coolidge's policy of naval retrenchment rather than expansion. Without going so far as to say he be-

GROUNDS SUNDAYBig Concession Taken by Sheriff on Replevin
Writs

BULLETIN

Legal entanglements to decide the ownership of the ferris wheel, whip and seven concessions seized by deputies from the sheriff's office at Amboy yesterday, were increasing at noon today. Chief Deputy William Rose was notified by telegram from Chicago to withhold action pending advice from attorneys representing Gluskin, owner of the carnival company.

Plans had been completed about midnight last night to move the equipment at the fair grounds and load it on cars for shipment, but acting on advice of Gluskin's attorneys in Chicago, the chief deputy early this morning halted laborers and truck drivers from moving the property.

Chief Deputy William Rose of the sheriff's office is today in possession of the best part of a carnival and since noon yesterday has been making every effort to rid himself of the property. A ferris wheel, a whip and seven concessions together with tents and merchandise were seized by deputies from the sheriff's office at Amboy Sunday afternoon on a replevin writ issued out of the circuit court of Cook county.

The Sam Gluskin Company which moved into the Amboy fair grounds last week with the ferris wheel, whip and ten concessions is the defendant in the action which was brought by A. L. Williams, colored attorney, of Chicago. Attorney George W. Lawrence of Chicago, a member of the firm was in Amboy and Dixon Saturday and Sunday looking after the property, which was attached by deputies yesterday.

CUT IN BUILDING NAVY WILL MEET BIG OPPOSITION

Reeves aviation has supplanted surface fighting, the president does take the position that it at least promises to do so.
It opposes an ambitious surface program at a time when a few years' developments may prove every cent spent to have been wasted. The economy element in congress certainly will make the most of this condition.

Value Indeterminable
The truth is, aviation's value, as an independent fighting force is hard to determine. Its advocates are open to the suspicion of over-enthusiasm. The opposition group of experts are equally open to the suspicion of fearing it because it would rob them of their profession. It may take a war to settle the argument.

MINING OF HARD COAL WILL STOP AT CLOSE OF DAY

employed in handling coal shipments and in shops and car repair work probably will be thrown out of work.
The suspension will be practically 100 percent effective. The region has been thoroughly organized by the union and the handful of men the union has permitted its members to associate with, despite lack of union buttons, is expected to quit as well.

To Invade Other Fields.
Many anthracite workers are preparing to set out for the soft coal fields on the hunt for other jobs. The ability of unionists to subsist by jobs picked up elsewhere now is half of what it was.
A general exodus is being predicted of miners seeking vacations, but the excursionists also will include the thrifter quota seeing temporary work in other industries.

The miners are demanding a ten per cent increase in wage rates, $1 a day more for day laborers, the check-off, a two year contract, equalization of rates, and other adjustments.
The operators insist all demands must first absolve themselves of any likelihood of increasing production cost before they can be given consideration. The men in turn refuse the proposal of the owners to leave the matter to arbitration and hold that negotiations are useless until the owners agree to consider demands on their merits regardless of cost. Negotiations were broken off at Atlantic City on August 4.

PLEDGE PROTECTION
Washington, Aug. 31.—(AP)—Officials of the United Mine Workers of America have assured Secretary Davis that every effort will be made to protect property and lives at the mines during the suspension of work in the anthracite coal fields.

Quincy, Ill., Aug. 31.—(AP)—To make up to this nation and to the world, so far as may be "the terrible losses in death and suffering and destruction which resulted from the catastrophe upheaval of the Great War," is the animating purpose and compelling ambition of the American Legion, said National Commander James A. Drain, speaking today before the annual convention of the Illinois department.

"We men of the Legion," the commander declared, "have looked upon the woes and disasters which have come upon the world from that mighty conflict. We have seen it face to face and know how deep into the soul of mankind is seared the terrible fact of that epoch-making struggle."

"But we are not content to see the scars alone. We have taken from them the wreckage of the war and the sufferings and the heroism of it new devotion to the cause of country, state and community. We have accepted these things as a challenge to us to force out of all the welter and morass of sorrow and loss some good, something by which the world may say that it is the better. That is the purpose which carries this Legion of ours forward through the years, seeking with each succeeding year new services which we may give."

"You men of Illinois, by the splendid record which you have made for 1925, have shown that you have grasped and turned to profit the lesson of sacrifice and selflessness and devotion to the cause of others. You have given a highly successful demonstration of the bit department carrying on the whole, rounded program of Legion to the neglect of none of its activities."

Mr. Drain outlined some of the activities which have distinguished the Illinois department. "You can be proud of its membership work. Illinois is the only state with a large total membership which equaled its record for last year. When the tornado struck the southern part of the state, you men were among the first on the ground with organized relief, your legislative efforts. In the field of child welfare work, you have attained notable success. Illinois Legionnaires are known to others for their outstanding service program for the disabled."

Has Aided Disabled
Accomplishments of the American Legion in Illinois on behalf of disabled veterans of the World War were reviewed today by Herbert L. Moulton, chairman of the department of rehabilitation committee. "The public at large," Mr. Moulton said, "does not realize the work we have done."

He detailed some of the year's accomplishments as follows:
Erection of a new 325 bed hospital by the U. S. Veterans bureau, to be completed January 1, 1926, and the promise of the Director of the Bureau secured two weeks ago to increase the bed capacity to 500. Completion of this hospital will care for all disabled veterans of Illinois needing hospitalization.

Legislation secured for 400 additional beds for insane service men at Elgin. "This will make a total of 615 beds for the exclusive use of the insane in Illinois and is to be considered the first installment of the Soldiers and Sailors Rehabilitation home authorized by the convention at Champaign. Construction is under way and the architect expects the building to be ready about May 1926."

Authority gained from Governor Small for expenditure of $25,000 for an Occupational Therapy building for veterans at Elgin State Hospital. Construction will be completed May 1926.

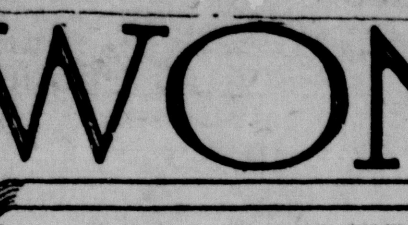

Return to the jurisdiction of the Illinois Legion of the U. S. Veterans bureau, forty-six counties in southern Illinois, which the previous year had been transferred to the St. Louis office.

Mr. Moulton presented a resolution for the convention's consideration requesting an appropriation for the increase of the capacity of the new Great Lakes hospital for the insane from 550 to 1,000 beds.

Another resolution Mr. Moulton presented would provide for the immediate commencement of a survey, under the auspices of the National Rehabilitation committee, of ex-service men in all penal institutions in the United States, and appropriate recommendations made to all state and federal authorities for the disposition of men found to be suffering from mental disorders.

Family Reunion Sunday Enjoyed

The family reunion held Sunday at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Andrews, 315 East McKinney street, was a most enjoyable affair. There were eleven present to appreciate the tempting dinner at noon and the generally happy day. Prof. Wilson of the State University of Wisconsin was unable to be present. Four generations were represented. Mrs. Fred Rickman of Washington, Ill., who was present being the great grandmother, her age being 84 years. Her husband, Fred Rickman, was not able to be present, not being strong enough to make the journey as his wife did last week. He is 71 years old, many times those present expressed the wish that he could have been with them. The others present were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Heyard of Chicago, Mrs. Grover C. Wilson and baby son of Madison, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. James B. Andrews, Miss Martelva Andrews, and Frederick Andrews and mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Andrews of Dixon. Pictures of the four generations, and of the family were taken.

Miss Edythe Pomeroy Was Honored Wed.

Misses Pearl Albrecht and Kathryn Dunton entertained Wednesday afternoon with a most enjoyable shower for Miss Edythe Pomeroy of Lee Center, who is soon to become the bride of M. Deward Brooks of Montrose, Col.

As the bride to be entered the house she was showered with rice and confetti. Many interesting games were then enjoyed. The gifts were presented in a clever manner, the bride finding them as milestones along the pathway to matrimony, followed and gathered one by one, by Miss Pomeroy.

A dainty two-course luncheon closed the pleasant afternoon, and between the courses advice on wedded life was read, written by the different girls. The house and luncheon tables were prettily decorated in green and white, emphasizing the lucky four-leaf clover.

Bridge Party and Shower Enjoyed

Miss Alice Richardson entertained on Friday evening with a bridge party and miscellaneous shower for Miss Mildred Reinhart, sixteen guests being in attendance. Flowers were the decorations employed. Miss Reinhart received a number of nice gifts, some of them accompanied by appropriate verses. Miss Mildred Page won the first prize at bridge and Miss Lucile Frye won the consolation prize. Dainty refreshments were enjoyed. Miss Reinhart and Harold Lahman of Sterling will be married soon.

Creamed carrots, toasted cheese sandwiches, celery, apple sauce, gingerbread, milk, tea.

Dinner—
Lamb loaf, creamed potatoes, buttered peas, salad of tomatoes stuffed with pineapple and cream cheese, blackberry cream, plain cake, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

If every family will use plenty of tomatoes and apples during the season for the fresh fruit they will be that much healthier. Babies less than a year old are given strained tomato juice and apple sauce as protective and corrective foods. Apples and tomatoes are usually cheap and they surely are quite as delicious as the most expensive delicacy.

Blackberry Cream.
Two cups blackberry pulp and juice, 1 cup sugar, 2 cups milk, 1 cup whipping cream, 2 eggs (yolks), 2 tablespoons gelatin, ¼ cup cold water.

Beat yolks of eggs with 2 tablespoons of sugar. Scald milk, add slowly to first mixture. Add ¼ teaspoon of salt and cook in double boiler until mixture coats spoon. Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve over hot water. Stir into mixture. Let stand until cool and add berry juice and sugar. When mixture begins to stiffen fold in cream whipped until firm. Turn into a mold and let stand on ice for several hours to chill and become firm. (Copyright, 1925, NEA Service, Inc.)

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—

Wrong Economy.
If your nice new dress is spotted with some substance you know nothing of, do not try to remove the stains yourself. Send the dress to the cleaners. The cost will be less than if you were to ruin the fabric.

Uncooked Desserts.
Use uncooked fruits for your desserts. They cost less than cakes and puddings, do not require much time to prepare and provide perfect nutrition.

Grow Your Own Greens.
Instead of buying your soupgreens every time you wish to make soup for the family dinner grow your own greens in a window garden box. It is much more economical and also quite ornamental.

LAWN PARTY TO BE HELD—

Wednesday evening of this week at the home of Mrs. William Morris on Hazelwood Road there will be a lawn party sponsored by the Woman's Missionary Society. All members of the church and congregation are most cordially invited to attend. There will be no program but every effort will be made to see that all have a good time. The pastor would suggest that this be made a regular old-fashioned "Get Together." Ice cream and home-made cake will be served. The treasury of the Missionary society will benefit thereby.

AID AND MISSIONARY SOCIETIES TO MEET—

Both the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies of the St. James church will hold an all-day meeting with Mrs. Della Sauer Thursday, Sept. 10. Members are asked to attend the meeting prepared to sew.

Shower for Miss Reinhart Thursday

Miss Grace Byers entertained most delightfully on Thursday afternoon at her home, guests for three tables of bridge and also a kitchen shower for Miss Mildred Reinhart, who is soon to marry Harold Lahman of Sterling. The attractive decorations were in yellow. Miss Mildred Reinhart won the first prize at bridge and Miss Mildred Hertle the consolation prize. A tempting two-course luncheon was served. Miss Reinhart received many useful gifts.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

The cable announcement that Mustapha Kemal Pasha has divorced his wife, Latife Hanoum, whom he married in 1921, reminds us of the difference in customs between the east and west.

Latife Hanoum, a feminist, the daughter of a rich Syrian merchant, wielded a great influence over her husband and was responsible for much of the freedom women have recently gained, such as going out after sunset, being allowed at public functions, and dropping the veil.

Doubtless many of the dyed-in-the-wool antifeminists in Turkey hated and feared her.

When Mustapha Kemal decided he wanted this attractive girl with the large black eyes, who had been educated in England and France, for his wife, he did not have to go through any campaign of courtship.

All he had to do was to call a court official and make this simple declaration to him:

"I have decided to marry Latife Hanoum. Will you kindly accomplish the necessary ceremonies."

Whereupon his emissary made quick tracks to the parental home of the lady and said:

"Do you accept as husband Ghazi Mustapha Kemal Pasha in return for a gift from him of 100 dreechmas of silver on condition of a mutual indemnity agreed upon by you in the event of the separation?"

Her reply in the affirmative and her father's check for 1,000,000 Turkish lire, equivalent to $500,000, completed the transaction.

There were probably burning letters, declarations of love and affection, and gifts, but these were after the main issues had been decided upon. The proposal was of a business rather than personal nature.

When he tired of her beauty, and perchance of her modern ideas, he issued an official statement that, having decided to separate from his wife, he had issued a decree pronouncing a divorce, effective from August 15th.

Pretty soft.

All he has to do now is to return the 1,000,000 lire. But the cable reports do not say whether he has attended to this detail or not.

When a man gets tired of his wife in Turkey, he just divorces her. The fact that he doesn't desire her presence around the harem any more is just cause for it. He writes her a polite note and tells her so. That is her cue to get out.

She can't bring a counter suit, produce evidence that she has been a faithful and blameless wife. She can't get a million dollars worth of publicity in the home paper defend in gher position.

The marriage is over. But, when the husband gets his divorce, he returns the wife's dowry.

Recently, a reform for which Turkish women may thank Latife Hanoum, a woman may have the right to seek divorce, and if she can prove certain claims it is granted, but few Turkish women avail themselves of this.

Divorcing is a man's job. In the west, most divorces are obtained by women. But a woman never knows just what her divorce will bring in alimony or publicity.

Her value changes with the prosperity of her husband, the popularity of her "grounds" or the cleverness of her lawyer. She never knows until she "gets her papers" just what she is worth divorced.

But in Turkey there is no guess-work. The Turkish woman returns her husband to society for exactly what her liege lord paid for her—without interest.

YOUR PORCH IN WINTER—

What do you do with your porch in fall and winter? Is it just so much wasted space, a place for dust and snowdrifts, a bleak corner where cold winds howl and whistle? Or is it a snug, sunshiny noon, colorful with bright furnishings and flowers; gay with the sound of happy laughter, a practical "extra" room for you and your whole family.

It's ever so easy and inexpensive to have a sun room, where outdoor cheer can mingle with indoor comfort—and now's the time to plan for it.

Just "glass-in" your summer porch and furnish it simply with wicker chairs, a table or two, and a few

Notable Wedding Celebrated Saturday

Watch Hill, R. I., Aug. 29. — Persons of social prominence were here today for the wedding of Miss Anita Lihme, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Lihme, Chicago and Watch Hill, to Prince Edward Joseph Lobkowitz.

The wedding was set for 4 p. m., and the Rev. John P. Vincent, pastor of the Immaculate Conception, Roman Catholic Church at Westerly, was chosen to perform the ceremony. A reception in Normal Hall, summer residence of the Lihmes was arranged. The bride is 21 years old and is well known as a golfer.

Prince Edward, who is 26 years old, is descended from one of the oldest families in Europe, his ancestors having been princes under the holy Roman empire in 1025.

Prince Edward, who has been in the United States about a year, is in the caviar business in New York.

Navy blue rep and taffeta are combined in smart coats and dresses that will be excellent style for fall as well as summer.

That Soft Effect.
Beaded chiffons and georgettes are handled much more softly and gracefully than ever before and they are very smart for evening.

Fullness All Around.
There is a hint from Paris that fullness will be introduced in the back of the skirt as well as in the front in the fall models.

Velvet and Ostrich.
The summer wrap that is creating much attention is of velvet brocade georgette crepe or chiffon trimmed with ostrich.

New York—This great metropolis is not without its share of suburban life and commuters' comedies. Some of the outlying subdivisions spring up so rapidly that the telephone company and other public utilities cannot keep pace with them.

Out in Long Island there is a community of several hundred homes which were all completed at about the same time. Not one of them has a telephone and so the real estate office has become a message exchange and its one telephone is overloaded with traffic.

Here are some of the messages which Mac, the attendant, is asked to deliver.

"Say, will you run up to my house and tell my wife business keeps me in town tonight?"

"Hello, Mac, do me a favor, will you? Just run over to Marie's house and tell her I missed the train and I'll be out later."

"Mac, please, run down to the house and ask mother whether she wants creamy butter, or tub butter, I forgot."

"Is this Mac? Well, will you go over to Emma's house and ask her if she's got a date tonight and if she ain't will it be all right for me to come out? Tell her this is Joe. She'll know."

"Say, Mac, will you run over to the house and see if I closed the windows. I'll hold the line until you come back."

Mac is just about disgusted with his job. The housewives call on him about a dozen times a day to regulate the plumbing, or to fix a warped door or to put up window screens or shades. And he has a healthy disrespect for the Manhattanites who try to garden.

"Why, one of them dumb boobies sprinkled grass seed all over bare clay that was baked hard as cement and then sat down to watch the grass grow," he told me.

Most of the pickpocket episodes along the great white way are looked upon as burlesque jokes, but Dan Fish, who recently came here from Cleveland, will tell you differently. He stopped to look at the electric signs in Times Square last night and a light-fingered gent relieved him of his watch. "What I don't understand," complains Fish, "is how he knew that watch was in my upper coat pocket. There wasn't a chain or anything on it to show where it was."

Although the police are able to spot a sneak thief or a pickpocket on sight due to certain unfailing

Stop That Backache!

Many Dixon Folks Have Found the Way.

Is a dull, nerve-racking backache wearing you out? Do you feel older and slower than you should? Are you tired, weak and nervous; find it impossible to be happy, or enjoy the good times around you? Then there's something wrong and likely it's your kidneys. Why not get at the cause? Use Dean's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Your neighbors recommend Dean's. Read what this Dixon resident says:

Mrs. C. Smith, 113 Douglas St., Dixon, says: "My back ached and I had bearing down pains through the small of it. Dizzy spells came over me and specks came before my eyes, causing everything to get black before me. My kidneys acted too freely and I felt all out of sorts. A friend recommended Dean's Pills so I used a box from Sullivan's Drug Store. They fixed me up in fine shape. 59c. at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mrs. Buffalo, N. Y."

characteristics, they are never able to stop their activities completely. The adventure of their trade drives them on to play it even when faced with the certainty of arrest. Detectives who know the faces of almost every sneak thief and pickpocket in the country are always on watch along Broadway, yet visitors who stop to look at electric signs frequently miss their watches or wallets.

New York—See-sawing up and down Broadway I saw Gloria Gould with her charming little snubbed nose. And very busy she seemed arranging for the opening of her new theater. Saw Jack Yellen, a young song writer, who once hit Broadway with a bump and borrowed enough for fare back to Buffalo. But now his pockets jingle with coin made from "I Wonder What's Become of Sally?"

Saw Pat Rooney and Marion Bent who have headed in vaudeville for almost 20 years. Now they are going to have their own play on the legit and little Pat Rooney will appear with them.

Saw Fred Stone, back in town after a summer on his Connecticut farm where he plans to breed thoroughbred Arabian horses.

Saw Heywood Brown, the columnist, whom I shall not see so often on Broadway since he has turned over his show review duties to Alexander Woolcott. Hereafter Brown will go to the theater to see only what plays he deems will please him and for that he may rejoice.

Saw Dick Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, college boys who wrote the lyrics and music for a revue which was tried out as an experiment, but which has gone into a long run. This, of course, has pleasantly affected their bank roll and they are beginning to wonder why they are going to college.

Saw Edna Purviance, the film actress, who played "The Woman of Paris." She was on her way to Paris for the first time to see what such a woman really is like.

Saw Alice Boulden, a niece of Wilton Lackaye. She used to sing in a night club, but now she is a principal in a big musical revue.

Saw Margaret Merle, who once was a Kansas City newspaperwoman and is now a singer in a Broadway production. Between times she writes a Broadway column for folks in the old home town.

Saw Monty Ball, the movie director and a popular man here as among the scribes and Pharisees and well he should be, for once he declared that the city editor of a newspaper does more work in a day than a movie director does in a month.

Many along Broadway are mourning the passing of Joe Susskind, electrocuted in the hotel he owned at Palm Beach, Fla. Susskind in his life accumulated several fortunes in cabaret and hotel ventures, but he got his start by saving nickels and dimes while working in the cloak room of the old Knickerbocker.

Another famous institution of the town's life is about to pass. Mouquin on Sixth avenue, is posted for lease. It was padlocked last March. After that two waiters, who had been employed there for more than 20 years, committed suicide. The place was once owned by Jacquin, who in the past generation was famous because he drove to the races in a coach-and-four and wore a high silk hat as he sat on the high seat. He died while washing dishes in the cafe he once owned.

ON A HOT TRAIL.

The United States senate will not go all the way over to Vice President Dawes in his demand for change in the rules of that body, but the concessions discussed make it appear that the persistency of the presiding officer may not be without reward.

Senator James A. Watson of Indiana, assistant leader, has spoken. In an interview in Chicago he said:

"General Dawes is a good fellow; he's my friend and I like him. However, the only change I would make in the rules, if I were changing them, would be to require senators, during the last two weeks of a session, to confine themselves to the subject under consideration. Otherwise the present rules are satisfactory."

General Dawes suggested that the rules permit a majority of the senate to end debate and bring to a vote a matter for legislation. Ability of one man to bargain and barter under threat of talking to death an important measure is the point of his attack. It is the point of attack by Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, democratic leader.

At no time has it appeared that these two men who have taken the lead in the fight for change in the rules are bent on limiting debate as it is limited in the house of representatives. Undoubtedly Senator Underwood, who has been a member of the minority party during the greater part of his long service in congress, is as desirous as anyone to preserve the rights of the minority, and they should be preserved.

It is probable that the concession approved by Senator Watson will serve to end the practice of which there is complaint. The very wording of his concession shows the weakness of the present rules.

"To require senators during the last two weeks of the session to confine themselves to the subject under consideration," is his suggestion. The fact that they are not so limited now shows how far the abuse of senatorial privilege has gone. The fact that a senator may discuss everything of which he knows anything and whether he knows anything about it or not, and the senator intimates that that is the case, is in itself a weakness of which he confesses and convicts.

Senator Watson would limit the filibusterers only during the last two weeks of the session, compelling them during that period to confine themselves to the subject before the senate. When the protest went up that General Dawes was seeking to prevent full debate, to reform the senate so that it no longer will be the world's greatest deliberative body, it sounded as if the complaining senators were afraid they would be deprived of debating the issues that are before it. Naturally the people favor a full hearing and a full debate, and there was something to an appeal that such should not be curtailed.

Now comes Senator Watson with the admission that they do not talk on the issue before the senate at all. They may read from an encyclopedia, a textbook on evolution or a book of recipes. And that constitutes the debate of the greatest deliberative body in the world, when one of them wishes to talk to death a measure in which some minor concession has not been made to him.

We are of the opinion that the public does not desire to curtail legitimate debate, that it does not wish to introduce a system by which rights of the minority are subjected to mob legislation, but the more the senators talk, the more one is inclined to think that General Dawes is on the trail of something that ought to be snared.

REJUVENATING THE TREES.

After ice formations on trees had weighted branches and some times the trees down to the ground, tree surgeons were summoned to make amputations and to treat as many as were worth saving, through central Illinois last winter.

The work was done skillfully and spring and summer have witnessed recovery of all except the shape of the torn trees. Aids to rejuvenation have been found, and a Springfield man with a row of sturdy elms is making an effort to restore them more speedily to full health.

Along this row has been dug a trench, in the bottom of which has been placed approved plant foods. When the filling was done a length of tile was placed upright at intervals, and through it is administered additional food and water.

Where trees are plentiful and of easy growth they are not appreciated for their full worth, except when they are a part of man, a tree is jealously guarded. Cities maintain tree comital Illinois last December.

In southern California, an arid land except for the works of man, a tree is jealously guarded. Cities maintain tree commissions, which control the destinies of these ornaments. Only with the consent of the commission may one be removed.

Hereafter people of central Illinois will appreciate more their trees.

Let there be no backward step is the motto of automobile drivers attending to the increasing of the weekend casualty list.

Standardization works for everything but humans. The same money will give more children better rooms, clothes and food in orphan asylums than in scattered homes, where they might be individually adopted. Simply as a matter of economic distribution, the large scale method is the more efficient. But as a matter of human welfare, the individual home is infinitely better, and we are everywhere coming to it.

Education is harder. The wholesale lock-step is being only gradually broken in our common schools. Higher up, universities have grown until they almost need a brigadier general to herd the students in and out.

"This place is like a biscuit factory," said a discouraged professor. "In the factory, they run a trainload of wheat in at one end and a trainload of packed biscuits out at the other. The sign says that, in the interval, the goods 'have not been touched by human hands.' That is a fine way to make biscuits, but a bad way to educate students."

Criminology is worst of all. The worst way to reform a criminal is to put him in prison.

Most criminals are young, the product of bad homes.

Many of them could have been saved by putting them in time into good homes.

Few of them are helped by putting them into even good institutions. Most of them are spoiled by throwing them into prison.

Industry is most important because it affects us all. Mass production turns out more and better steel or shoes. But it does not, inside the works, make for better men.

Its better wages and shorter hours may give them more chance for improvement outside, but, to them, "life" is something apart from work.

The man at the lever of the peg machine in a modern shoe factory gets better pay for less work than did his predecessor, the village cobbler. But the cobbler, working all day at his bench, and living his life in his work, was also often the village philosopher.

If the peg-tender achieves anything intellectual, the work contributes nothing but money to it. It offers nothing of joy or thought.

This is the dilemma of the industrial age.

Good Examples Needed in Orient

The "long tragedy of the handloom workers of England" in finding its analogy in China.

Alongside the old hand industries, in family and guild groups, great factories are growing up, differing from American and European factories only in the lower wages, longer hours and worse conditions of the workers.

These conditions are often no worse than in the native hand industries, but they are more wholesale, and have less excuse.

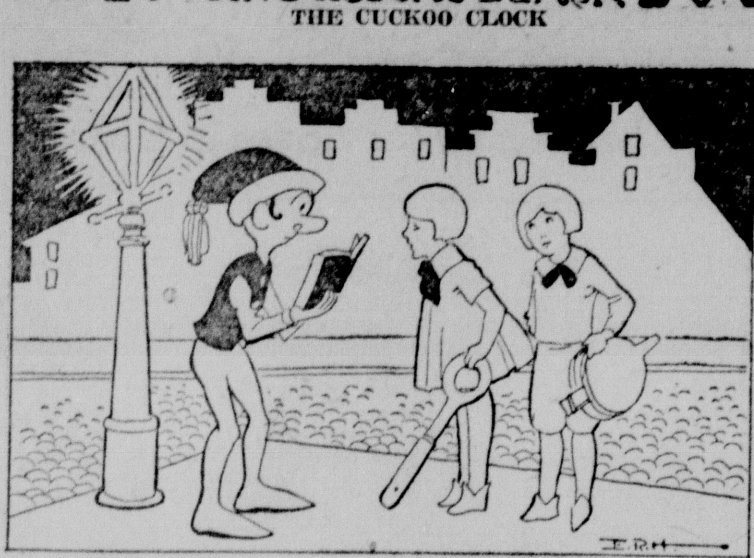

The first effect of the same conditions, in England, was to oppress and exploit the factory workers, and, by their competition, to starve the hand workers.

The very resistance of the weavers to the change delayed the readjustment which, when it came, turned out to be a benefit to all.

The same thing is starting in China. Left to the unrestricted operation of economic forces, guided only by human selfishness, the same results will follow.

And there is no effective Chinese government to prevent. Either peacefully, by the penetration of modern ideals to the capitalistic brain, or violently, by the unex-

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

"We'll have to go and fix the cuckoo clock next," he said.

"Where to now?" asked Nick. Tick Tock, the little clock fairy, stopped under a street lamp and looked at a little book he had taken out of his pocket.

"We'll have to go and fix the cuckoo clock next," he said. "It belongs to deaf old Mister Kubler who lives on the hill. Come on, Nancy and Nick, follow me and we will soon be there."

Off scampered the little fairy followed by the Twins. Nancy carried the big key for winding the clock, and Nick carried the oil-can for oiling it. Tick Tock carried the bellows which he did the dusting and a lot of other useful things besides which he might need in his clock mending.

In about two minutes the three were at the top of the hill and standing before a nice old house with a wide porch and a big chimney.

"Shall we go down the chimney like we did at the last place?" asked Nick.

"No, it won't be necessary," said Tick Tock. "Mister Kubler never locks his doors. He says that the more he trusts the world the better it likes him, and if he has anything that will do anyone more good than it does him, he is welcome to take it."

"Nobody ever goes in or touches a thing except to do him a kindness, such as we are doing now. Come on. The cuckoo clock hangs right in the living room."

The little fairy jumped up to the door knob and gave it a turn and Nick pushed. The three were soon inside and Tick Tock lighted a glass lamp that stood on the table. At that instant something went "cuckoo-cuckoo, cuckoo." Then it stopped.

unpled power of resistance of the Chinese when aroused, the process which took a generation in England will be aborted.

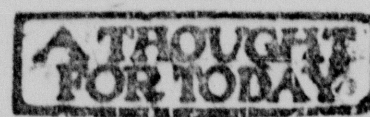

Men do not go the same slow road the second time. The Standard Oil and many other foreign companies in the orient, have seen and acted on this principle. Some others have not.

The safety, profitability and peace of the opening orient depend on the general following of these good examples.

Champaign, Ill., Aug. 29.—(AP)—Art Donohue, of Champaign, was arrested here this morning and held on a charge of murder, on advice from Springfield police that he was wanted in connection with the death last week of Edward Fannon, alias "Blackie" Ryan, who was found in an unconscious condition in Springfield, suffering from blows on his head.

Mariticide is Suing for Hubby's Insurance

Chicago, Aug. 29.—(AP)—Mrs. Bernice Zallimas, who recently was sentenced to prison for 14 years for killing her husband by poison, today filed suit against the New York Life Insurance Company in an effort to collect his insurance. The claim is based on a double indemnity clause of the $5,000 policy, the double amount being stipulated in case of accidental or violent death. Her attorney explained that she seeks the insurance money in order to appeal from her conviction.

He Must Be Doing Well Now

Mrs. Spencer spoke to her husband. "I think we had better call around and see the Browns," she said. "You know we thought they were failures, but today I met Mr. Brown down town and he was looking fine, well dressed and cheerful. He certainly must be doing well now."

They say misery likes company. Success loves company, too, but it wants successful company. And you can't blame people for that either; it's bed rock human nature.

The question is: Do you permit people to class you as a failure, or must they class you as a success?

NEW ASSISTANT
COACH AT DIXON
HIGH THIS YEARB. O. Cully Comes Very Highly Touted; Bowers
at Schools

With the drawing to a close of the summer vacation period and students preparing to take up their school duties in Dixon, prospects for athletic activities during the coming school year are a subject of a great deal of discussion.

Coach A. C. Bowers has spent part of his summer vacation in a coaching school conducted by the Culver Military Academy, having had football instruction under Coach Knute Rockne of Notre Dame and basketball under Dr. Meanwell of Wisconsin.

With Coach Bowers this season, will be associated a man with a very good record—B. O. Cully, who has been at the University of Illinois this summer. He comes as an associate coach and will have charge of the line while Coach Bowers will work with the back field in football. Mr. Cully is a graduate of Illinois college of the class of 1922 and for the past three years since his graduation he has had complete charge in Florida, his football team being undefeated for two seasons and winning the championship of southern Illinois. In basketball his team was twice successful in winning the district championship.

As an athlete in college he played half back on the football team, floor guard on the basketball team and in track his specialty was the low hurdles and broad jump. Coach W. T. Harmon who for the past twenty years has been director of athletics at Illinois college, in commenting on Cully's appointment at Dixon, said: "I believe that Cully is the best all round athlete who has represented Illinois college in the past twenty-five years. He is a fine student and a real fellow."

Coach Bowers and Mr. Cully working together in football and basketball and with Prof. Weiss in track should be able to produce very good athletic teams for the Dixon high school.

BAMBINO PLANS TO APPEAL HIS CASE TO LANDISBoth Club Owner and League Head Approve
His Suspension

BULLETIN

Chicago, Aug. 31—(AP)—"Babe" Ruth, and boy of the New York Yankees, failed today in his plan to appeal personally to Baseball Commissioner Landis, against the $5,000 fine and suspension disciplinary penalties imposed by Manager Huggins of the Yankees. The commissioner was out of the city, having gone to his summer place at Burt Lake, Michigan.

While Ruth slumbered late today in the heat of Chicago and his ire with Huggins, he had no inkling that the baseball commissioner was enjoying the cool of upper Michigan.

Ruth was up late last night telling reporters what he thought about Manager Miller Huggins, and left word with the hotel clerk not to disturb him until 10 a. m. today. He had said last night he would see commissioner Landis today and board the 20th Century Limited early in the afternoon for New York.

Seeing possible further verbal onslaughts by the embattled Ruth when he should arise, eager writers and camera men advanced their forces and took up a position in the hallway just outside Babe's door, awaiting sounds of the beginning of a new day for the great swatter.

Chicago, Aug. 31—(AP)—Indefinitely suspended and under a fine of $5,000 for misconduct off the playing field, baseball's quondam king of swat, George Herman (Babe) Ruth, was here today with the intention to place his case before baseball's supreme power, Commissioner K. M. Landis, who himself once disciplined the great home run hitter in a degree comparable to that just promulgated by Miller Huggins, the midwest manager of the New York Yankees.

Without appealing to intermediate power, the Babe already had lost two decisions.

Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, voiced satisfaction with the management of the club and expressed indignation that Ruth should attempt to assume the role of dictator in the club's policy.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, announced himself heartily in accord with Huggins' action in disciplining Ruth. He called Ruth a man with the mind of a 15 years old boy and intimated that the Babe probably will not play again this season.

"Misconduct, drinking and staying out all night are things that will not be tolerated," Mr. Johnson said. Babe came here from St. Louis where Huggins broke the news of the suspension and fine to him. He seemed to be in fine physical condition, and was in a jovial mood. He denied but little that Huggins had said against him, but sought to justify his own actions.

Jim Bottomley, Cardinal clouting first sacker, bore much of the burden of St. Louis' aftermath of the bargain bill in Gotham. He drove in five of the Cardinal's eight runs without making a base hit bigger than a single.

Rogers Hornsby, St. Louis leader, went hitless in the first game with New York, but in the second, in four trips to the plate he poled a three bagger, two doubles and a single and added a base steal for good measure.

Frankie Frisch, Giant keystone sack custodian, won the first game for the McGraw men. His homer in the first drove in Southworth ahead of him.

Big Ed Rummel, one of Connie Mack's mainstays on the Athletic hitting staff, turned wildman after he relieved Walberg against the Tigers. After two had singled in succession in the third four Tigers were issued free transportation to first and four runs happened as a result. In the sixth the Tigers bunched four hits and three more runs.

The veteran Tyrus who stayed up late the night before, while he was dined and toasted by Detroit fans and officials, went hitless.

A home run by Gehrig, Yank first baseman, and three hits, one a double by Combs, Yank centerfielder, were insufficient against the Browns. Paschal appeared in right field in place of the suspended Babe Ruth.

The veteran Zack Wheat led the Robins' attack in the aftermath. In five trips to the pan, he poled a homer, a triple and a double.

Wingfield, Boston hurler, and Wingfield, Indian pitcher, staged a hurling duel for eight innings in Cleveland. Then Wamby scored on his single and a triple by Lee, Cleveland came back with two tallies after bunting a single, triple and a double.

Cape Gris Nez, France, Aug. 31—(AP)—Gertrude Sderle, the American girl swimmer must do without music as a stimulus when she enters the water on her second attempt to swim the English Channel tomorrow morning at 5:30 o'clock.

The jazz band which accompanied the swimmer on a tug during her August 18 attempt to negotiate the tough waterway, has refused to dergo such an experience. The four musicians suffered so keenly from seasickness during the trip that they left Boulogne immediately the tug put back on landing returned to their homes in Lille without ever calling on Organizer Costa for pay for their services.

A few days ago Costa wrote the musician to come to Boulogne with a view of furnishing the sprightly tunes when the American girl again takes to the water for the journey over the heaving bosom of the channel.

"Send us the thousand francs due us by mail," was the reply received. "We are sorry we cannot undertake to play on the tug even for three times that amount."

American League by Three Games

New York, Aug. 31—(AP)—Most major league clubs today were marking time, only four games being scheduled. Tomorrow a big series begins at the capital between Washington and Philadelphia.

Washington increased its lead to three and one half games on the Mackmen by defeating the White Sox yesterday 9-6, while Detroit was beating the Athletics 7-4 and making a complete sweep of the three game series. It was the seventh victory for the Tigers and the sixth setback in a row for the Athletics.

The Yankees, minus Babe Ruth, who was put out of a job indefinitely by Manager Huggins, closed their western invasion with a defeat in St. Louis, 7-6. Getting wallowed his 15th home run of the year and batted in four of the 14 games since leaving home.

Cleveland sewed up the series with the Red Sox by winning 2 to 1, bunting three hits for two runs in the ninth.

The Giants were unable to make headway in the National League pennant scramble, taking a shutout from St. Louis in the second game of a double header, 8-0, after clinching the opener, 3-1. The Pirates continue in their lead of seven games, taking an exhibition game from Jersey City Internationals, 4-1. The Glats have won eight games and lost eight in their engagements with the western clubs.

Brooklyn polished off Cincinnati in both sections of a double program, 4-3 in 10 innings, and 10-8. Rixey, Red twirler, was chased off the field by Umpire Quigley in the first game after disputing a decision.

Health ColumnSurgeon General, United States

Mumps is an acute infectious disease usually affecting children but frequently occurring in older people. It affects the parotid glands which are on each side of the head just below the ear.

It usually occurs in children of from five to fifteen years of age but may recur at any age. Mumps is conveyed from one patient to another by contact. The first symptoms are pain and swelling in the parotid region under the ear. Movements of the jaws, such as chewing and talking are painful. The swelling may occur on one or both sides. Usually both sides are involved.

The attack generally comes on about fifteen to twenty days after exposure to the disease. It is at its worst about the third day and may gradually disappear after that. Mumps is contagious before the symptoms appear and for some time after the symptoms have disappeared. The disease may, and frequently does occur as an epidemic. The parotid glands are most frequently involved. After these the submaxillary and other glands may be attacked.

GERMS COME FROM MOUTH AND NOSE

Mumps is rarely spread by indirect contact or by a third person. The virus is contained in the secretions from the mouth and perhaps the nose. It occurs more frequently in spring and autumn especially during wet weather.

One of the most serious aspects of mumps is the frequent and painful complications that may develop in other glands. Other infrequent complications are great prostration, a tendency to wild delirium, disturbances of the tissues of the spinal cord and brain, inflammation of the middle ear, tonsillitis and pneumonia. A patient suffering from mumps should be kept quiet, in bed, in order that none of these serious complications may develop.

LIGHT DIET IS BIG HELP

A light diet such as eggs, broth, milk, and rice pudding should be given. Sour food and acid drinks if taken into the mouth will be found to give considerable pain. If there is much pain hot applications may be placed over the swollen glands. Laxatives should be given when necessary.

You should remember:

1. In the prevention of mumps that necessary precautions should be taken in order that the disease may not be spread to others.
2. That all cases of mumps should be isolated.
3. No person who has not had the disease should be allowed to come in contact with an exposed non-immune for at least twenty-one days after the last exposure.

5. That all articles soiled with discharges from the nose and throat of the patient should be thoroughly disinfected or burned.

Cost of Utilities is Minor Living
Expense of Average Citizen

The total average charges for public utility service of citizens of the United States, urban and rural, is only about 6 per cent of the average individual income, according to a recent survey by the Society of Electrical Development.

According to the figures, 45 per cent of income is spent for food, 16 per cent for rent and taxes, 14 per cent for entertainment and charities, 12 per cent for clothing and 7 per cent for miscellaneous.

Of the remaining 6 per cent spent for some of the essential things of modern life, the table lists:

	Per Cent
Electricity	1.03
Railway Fares	2.00
Gas	1.08
Water Supply	0.21
Telephone	1.25
Street Car Fares	0.43

Modern utility services are no longer counted among the luxuries of life, so far as cost is concerned. Most people spend more for tobacco, candy, movie shows and other miscellaneous items than they do for all of their utility service combined.

LETTER FROM JAMES CONDON TO SALLY AITHERTON

Dear Sally:
Mr. Prescott gave me your letter, and while at first I thought it was just a piece of blooming bunk, the more I think of it now, the more I think there may be something in it.

Isn't it a strange thing, Sally, how much more persistent men and women are in their crookedness than they are in hanging on to their virtues when it is hard work.

Mr. Prescott made me go down to the police station and examine that orchid handkerchief, and I don't know whether it is imagination or not, but I seemed to detect a very faint odor of the fragrance that always hung about Mabel. It was one of her greatest charms.

Sally, it made me rather sick. I did love that woman. There was something so exotic, so thrilling about her. Even now it doesn't seem possible that anybody could have had the influence she had over me.

Well, that's that. Although I was pretty mad at you at the time. I'm darned glad of it now that you snapped me out of being such a fool. Why, do you know, Sally, if I'd gotten away with her, it might be I was coming back to get those pearls now. That would be a nice relative for you, wouldn't it?

The only thing that makes me rather leery about all this is that I can't see where she comes into the picture. Everyone, you know, has decided that Mrs. Prescott's pearls have been stolen by this gang of international jewel thieves, and that they had come from abroad purposed to do it. I know that when Mabel was here she did not belong to them, and then we put her on the boat for South America.

Of course she had had time to return, but it seems to me that after the muss she had already gotten into over here, she would want to stay away from the country for a while.

So much for theory, pro and con. Here's another straw, however, which points to Mabel being the woman. Last night when I left the office where I had been working quite late, I saw a taxi drawn up to the curb about a quarter of a block beyond the door from which I came out. There were a man and woman beside it. I would have sworn the woman was Mabel. I hurried toward them, but they evidently saw me coming and got in and drove off just as I got there. It seemed to me that the woman plainly kept her face away from me, but again you know I may have been seeing things.

If it was Mabel, what under the shining sun—or rather under the darkness of the night—was she doing prowling around the office? It makes me rather worried about the boss. She had it in for the boss, you know, more than any of the rest of us. Sometimes I really think that she had her eye on him more than on me, and when she found she couldn't get him, she took me as a second choice and intended to get even with him by getting away with the money.

THAT the location and industrial importance of some cities is little known beyond the confines of a few miles.

THAT these cities should tell the outside world who they are and where they are.

THAT they should do so by judicious advertising.

THAT the benefits will be mutual to the city and to the man looking for a home, a place to go into business or an investment.

THAT a spirit of harmony and loyalty to the home city on behalf of its citizens will do wonders.

THAT some dynamic force is needed in some cities to get the people to realize the wonderful opportunities that their locality possesses.

SEQUEL TO "THE FLAPPER WIFE"

THE STORY SO FAR:

MAY SEYMOUR, whose husband killed himself because of her love affair with another man, returns to her home town after a year's absence. She sells all her inherited property and with her entire fortune of $20,000 sets out to find and marry a man with money. At 27 May has made up her mind that there is no such thing as real love, and that therefore she is going to have whatever happiness that money can buy.

At Atlantic City she meets a divorcee, Carlotta Frothingham, and her two friends, DAN SPRAGUE and HERBERT WATERBURY. Both men pay court to May, greatly to the distress of Carlotta, who has been in love with Dan for many years.

May, however, sets her cap for Waterbury, having decided that he is the millionaire husband she is looking for. But finally she despairs of ever getting Waterbury to the point of a proposal and accepts Carlotta's invitation to enter with her in California.

Then, suddenly, Waterbury proposes, and May promises to marry him within a week. She turns over to him the $14,000 that is all she has left after buying a fur coat and some expensive clothes and jewels.

But she immediately regrets giving him the money when Carlotta, on the eve of her departure for California, warns her not to trust Waterbury too far. She hints that he and Sprague put over some shady stock deals from time to time.

May goes straight to Waterbury and demands the return of her money. Waterbury goes up to his room in the hotel for the check and never returns, and May realizes that she has been cheated out of every cent she has in the world!

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

HOW long she stood there, beside the railing, sobbing into the darkness, May never knew. But when she finally dragged her leaden feet back to the hotel lobby was almost empty, and only a light here and there on the frescoed walls illumined it.

She crossed the great, deserted space before the desk and asked the night clerk "If Mr. Waterbury had left any forwarding address." But Herbert, it seemed, had not. The earth had opened and swallowed him up, so far as May was concerned.

And yet, she was to hear from him again. . . .

Early the next morning, as she stood before the mirror patting cold cream into the circles under her eyes, a knock came upon the door. May opened it to a bellboy who handed her a letter—a letter from Waterbury himself!

Perhaps he had repented and was sending back the check to her! Wild hope rose in May's breast, as she tore open the cheap white envelope.

But within was only a single sheet of paper, penciled across in Waterbury's bold handwriting. "Don't be too sorry for yourself," it read. "Remember that you tried to put the hook into me. You didn't care the snap of your fingers about me, but you would have married me for the wad you thought I had. I got yours instead—that's all. And next time paste it in your hat that women never should be trusted with money—they simply don't know how to hang on to it."

The letter was signed "Herbie." May's heart surged hot against him as she read it.

When she had finished dressing she ordered a large breakfast and found that she had no appetite. When she had tipped the waiter she counted her money. She had exactly three dollars in the world!

Three dollars between her and starvation!

"Not that I feel at all hungry, as far as that goes!" May thought as she stood at her dresser, shoveling the change back into her coin purse.

"But I do need a roof over my head and a few little comforts like that!"

One thing was certain—she would have to sell her fur coat and the jewels she had just bought for herself. Perhaps the jeweler would take them back and give her what she had paid for the ring and the wrist watch.

"He certainly ought to—they're brand new," she thought. "And so is the coat. I'll take it back to the furrier and see what he'll do about it!"

She tackled the jeweler first. "No," he said firmly, shaking his bald head. "It makes no difference when you bought these things. They're second-hand the minute after you've paid for them."

He shook his head thoughtfully. "I'll give you half of what you paid me for them," he decided, after a long pause. "And that's better than you'd do anywhere else."

Ocean avenue, waiting for the supper bell to ring.

From the hall outside her door came the sound of a saxophone and the smell of frying onions. May's delicate nostrils quivered. If there was one thing in the world she despised above all other things it was the smell of onions.

And Miss Minny's house usually smelled of them—and sometimes of frying cabbage, which was almost as bad. . . .

By the time the supper bell did ring, May had almost no appetite. Slowly she went downstairs to the long table in a dining-room that was papered, most depressingly, in chocolate brown.

The soup had no taste at all. It was followed by soup meat, and carrots and the fried onions. May laid down her fork and looked around her.

The people who sat opposite her looked happy and cheerful enough. Perhaps they liked fried onions. . . .

"I suppose I'm just so out-of-sorts myself that nothing tastes good to me," May finally decided. "I could live on bread and water and enjoy it if I had an appetite. . . ."

She had not been able to eat for a week. She was not sick but heart-sick as she faced the future.

She was poor, as she never had been poor in her life. And ahead of her was the immediate necessity of going to work, back to the grind of typewriting for a living!

It seemed impossible that only a week ago she had been a well-to-do widow, living upon the fat of the land in a luxurious hotel. And here she was now—all but penniless, sitting at the supper table of a cheap boarding-house, trying to eat fried onions. . . .

She looked at them, piled in a shiny brown heap on her plate, flanked by a boiled potato and a chunk of beef with blue sides of gristle running through it. Ugh! . . .

Sick at her stomach, she pushed her chair back from the table, and passed swiftly out of the stuffy house to the clean air that smelled of the sea.

She stood on the porch looking up at the moon and the sky—eternal things, that brought peace to her heart as she stood there with lifted face and blown-back hair.

Life was built in layers, it seemed—first, a layer of happiness and good fortune, then one of misery and ill luck. . . .

"And when the unhappy time comes, I suppose the only thing to do is to grin and bear it," May told herself philosophically.

A voice behind her roused her from her thoughts.

"Nice night, isn't it?" it asked. May turned. The owner of the voice was one of the young men she had noticed at the table in the dining room she had just left—a fat, young man, with a round and rosy face, and a bald spot on the crown of his wide head.

Miss Minny had introduced him to May as "Mr. Sid Saller, who travels for the Satin-Silk Company"—what ever the Satin-Silk Company was.

"It's a heavenly night," May answered, not very cordially.

"Cold, though," Mr. Sid Saller went on. "Thought I'd ask you to go for a walk, but I guess it's too cold, don't you?"

Before May had time for a reply, he had answered his own question. "Yes, it's too darn cold for a walk," he decided. "Colder indoors. Let's hit a movie. What say?"

"I say 'No thanks,'" May answered coldly. "I—I have a headache, you see." She drew away from Mr. Saller, from whom the odor of fried onions seemed to fairly exude.

She heard him mumble something under his breath, and presently he went into the house, slamming the front door behind him. But in a moment he was back at her elbow again.

"Maybe you'd like to go for a stroll, after all," he said. "Walk off your headache, maybe, eh?" He pressed her upper arm ever so slightly with his thick fingers.

May drew herself away from this experimental touch, and her disgust showed in her face as she answered him. "No thank you, Mr. Saller," was all she said. And quietly, at that.

But Mr. Saller felt as if she had smacked him across his plump, pink face with its quivering globes of cheeks, and its yellow mustache. He left her without another word, and slammed the door behind him harder than ever when he went into the house.

In a few minutes May went in, too. She passed the parlor, where a noisy game of cards was in progress, and walked up the dark staircase to her own room. As she switched on the lights, she noticed how dirty and fly-speckled the globes were.

"This is a terrible place I'm living in!" she thought, with a shudder. "I've just got to get out of it!"

She sat down under the dim light, poured the contents of her beaded bag into her lap, and counted her money.

She had counted it twice before that day, and knew what she had to the last cent. But perhaps she had made a mistake—Perhaps she had more than she thought!

But no—there were exactly two hundred dollars and three cents in the imported bag with its sterling silver top. May held it up by its heavy chain and looked at it meditatively. She had paid almost a hundred dollars for it a month ago—feeling that she must have it!

The things women felt they "just must" have!—the imported bags, the perfume, the facial treatments and marcel waves, the silk stockings, and high-heeled slippers! Absurd things—but absurdly necessary!

For the first time since her childhood, May knew that she couldn't afford these things. She had no job that would yield her a weekly salary, no husband to pay her bills—nothing but two hundred dollars, and a mink coat. . . .

She took the coat from its hanger in the closet, and looked at it for a long time. She loved the feel of its soft golden fur—the sheer luxury of it. She would hate to sell it. . . .

"But I guess I've got to do it," she told herself bitterly.

She felt that she couldn't go back to the old life, yet—the hateful drudgery of pounding the keys of a typewriter all day long in somebody's dull office. It hadn't seemed so like drudgery ten years ago, when she had been stenographer to Dr. John Seymour.

But ten years of wifehood and ease since then had softened her. The very thought of work frightened her—disheartened her, now.

"I'll put it off as long as I can," she promised herself.

WOODS THEATER, CHICAGO
 WOODS THEATER, CHICAGO
 ROSE MAIRRE PRICES $1.00 TO $2.00

Maria Shumson, the golden voice, prima donna in "Rose-Marie," now in its 30th week at the Woods, says that there are many reasons why the role of "Rose-Marie" appeals to her so strongly.
 "Everybody loves a red-blooded man's play, with strong, healthy appeal to the audience as well as to the characters; they have a personal ap-actors. There is nothing sadder and there are no dull moments in Mr. Hammerstein's musical play. There is a thrilling vigor and vitality to "Rose-Marie" that seldom is found in this kind of entertainment.

 There is an inspiring beauty to the score that makes you sing; rather, it is the romance and hardness of the whole thing, or rather it is the gorgeous costumes, or the fact that the early scenes of the play are laid in the grandeur of the Canadian Rockies? The whole play seems to warm your blood with enthusiasm and you forget the theater and live and sing the story because there is a realism that you can not get away from. There is silent majesty to Kootenay Pass that always sets my blood to tingling, and when the orchestra strikes the first note of the "Indian Love Call," I forget that I am in the mimic world of the stage and seem to live in the reality of nature.

"The stage work of the actress can be best compared to people in the other parts of trade: if you like your work, you will give your best efforts; enthusiasm for what you are doing, then there can be no real success. Few musical plays have a story if it is distasteful and you have no that runs through the whole play; it is generally lost somewhere in the middle of the first act, which is the reason that musical comedy never appealed to me, but 'Rose Marie' is more like grand opera; the story is almost as important as the music and as I was educated in grand opera I suppose that is why the character of 'Rose Marie,' which is unusual in the types of people, its atmosphere and dramatic poetry, is more like the delectable cocktail than it is real work."

"MERCENARY MARY" IS MAKING BIG HIT AT GARRICK THEATER, CHICAGO

"Mercenary Mary," a musical comedy in two acts by Wm. B. Friedlander, with the lyrics by Mr. Friedlander and Con Conrad, is now at the Garrick Theater, under the management of L. Lawrence Weber of New York.

Pronounced by several Dixon people who have seen it as the best attraction in Chicago.
 In the chorus of "Mercenary Mary" this new musical comedy, will in all likelihood, take Chicago by storm. Such furious dancing as staged by a couple of dozen girls has, it is almost safe to say, never been seen in recent seasons on a local stage. In the first appearance of the girls in a number called "Charleston Mad," they fairly shook and audience unprepared for such a performance, generally stop the show when they come on

Poor Robber

Josephine Keating, of Chicago, was only 17, she'd lost her job as stenographer and couldn't find any work. So she got a revolver and tried to hold up a taxi driver. She was so nervous, though, that the driver took the gun away from her and carried her to a police station, where she is awaiting trial.

and arouse gales of applause. It seems almost beyond human endurance to dance nine times a week as this chorus really does, but they get away with it, for rightly it is no chorus as musical shows go, but a group of specialty dancers, who at times show their talents in solo work and then band together and fairly charge the audience with stunning effect.

 Allen Kearns, who will be remembered as one of the "Little Jesse James" company playing here not so many months ago, is the youthful hero in this new show, Marion Fairbanks, of the Twins of that name, makes a charming and comely heroine and it is really a polished dancer. Louis Simon, the lispng comedian, whose most recent engagement here was in the musical comedy, "Moonlight," and Sam Hearn, veteran funster, will rock laughter out of listeners by their antics. There, too, are Nellie Breen, a nimble stepper, John Boles, Frank Kingdom, who was with "Sallie" for a long run, our Chicago favorite Juliette Day, and many other notables.
